COCHISE: Recognizing the need to honor a bowhunter who has gone beyond the element of luck, which is present to some extent in every hunt, the Committee established the Cochise Award. This award will recognize the bowhunter who has become skillful in hunting a variety of species and who collected seven of the sixteen animals eligible for the program, as outlined in the By-Laws. Only two species, as of July 1, 1985, may be from the small game predator category. One of the seven approved animals must be a big game animal that meets or exceeds the minimum score for that species.

KAIBAB: This award was created so that even the very accomplished and experienced hunters could have an "ultimate goal" to pursue. Originally the committee thought that one entry for each of the fourteen (at that time) species should be required. However because three of those (Bison, Desert Bighorn Sheep, and Rocky Mountain Bighorn Sheep) are high profile with lower drawing odds, the requirement was dropped to eleven of the species, with seven meeting the minimum requirements for acceptance to the listings. This is a lofty goal, but achievable!
